Concussion

An estimated 300,000 sports-related concussions occur annually in the U.S. Among 15 to 24-year-olds, only motor vehicle crashes exceed sports as the leading cause of concussions.

A concussion is a traumatic brain injury that affects your brain function. Effects are usually temporary but can include headaches and problems with concentration, memory, balance and coordination. Symptoms, signs like nausea, cognitive and emotional ones like confusion and irritability, and sleep problems, too."

Concussions are usually caused by a blow to the head. Violently shaking the head and upper body also can cause concussions.

Some concussions cause you to lose consciousness, but most do not. It's possible to have a concussion and not realize it Concussions are particularly common if you play a contact sport, such as football. Most people usually recover fully after a concussion.

"If you see any symptoms of concussion, or have any concern, take your child out of the game immediately. Continuing to play with a concussion could be dangerous. Get your child evaluated by a doctor, and let her/him return to play only when it's safe to do so. The key phrase to remember is, 'When in doubt, sit it out.'"

PREVENTION

Reducing your child's exposures to impact, using proper equipment and technique, and following the rules of the game are very important. Helmets and mouthguards, though important, have not been shown to protect against concussions.
